Pre-Tourney Thoughts from CCC Head Coaches

Aaron Christian, Concordia:

"We are very excited to be the first women's basketball team in school history making it thus far. It will be a great experience for our kids and very rewarding for all of their hard work this season.

"From what I can see, Iowa Wesleyan is a very good team that will knock down 3-pointers. Looking at their starting lineup, it is very similar to ours and should be a good matchup.

"My expectation is that we go there and play to the best of our abilities. Since losing Rebecca Gimeno to injury in the playoffs our team has really stepped up and filled holes. I think of many teams who would pack it in after losing your leading scorer, but our team is playing really well in her absence. We are who we are.

"Being my first trip to the national tournament, I guess I am the rookie, and will take it in stride. Our coaching staff has been talking with many coaches from our league who have attended the tournament before to get their insight. We have picked up some valuable information and hope it we'll help us not look like the rookies we are. I think the tournament has some really great teams in it. I could see some upsets in the first round, because teams are so balanced. The top teams Morningside and Shawnee State have had unbelievable seasons by going undefeated, and look to be the favorites. I'm really hoping our conference can represent well at that national tournament, thus helping our conference in future year's ratings and seedings.

Lynn Kennedy, Southern Oregon

"Getting back to the national tournament has been a goal for this team since getting a taste of it last year. We wanted to come back and prove we belong. We feel fortunate to be one of 32 teams to play for a national championship.

"Black Hills State played a very tough preseason schedule and league schedule and they are used to success and getting to the national tournament.

"We want to come out and play to our potential. With everyone already having a taste of the tournament last year, hopefully any tournament jitters will be out of the way.

"Defense will be key for us. We've been preaching defense since last year's national tournament, and we know that this is another level and we have to step up to that level to be competitive.

"This year's field has five really strong teams at the top. It's the best it has been in the last four or five years."

Reagan Rossi, College of Idaho

"One of our main goals throughout the season has been to earn the right to play at the NAIA Tournament. This is an outstanding achievement for our team and will be an amazing experience for us all. It will be exciting for Christon Vander Esch, whose family is originally from Iowa.

"Don't take anything away from Hastings being the fifth-place team out of the GPAC; it has been the top conference in NAIA Division II women's basketball for years. Coach Dittman has a battle-tested team that advanced to the Final Four last year, and Lindsay Ducey will be one of the better posts we have seen this year.

"With our style of play, we have the ability to win games in this tournament. That being said, we need Nicole Gall to make perimeter shots, and Christon Vander Esch and Whitney Owen to be able to adjust to the physicality of the play at the national level. As we have all season long, we will take it one game at a time.

"We need to be able to play our game and not be content with making it to the NAIA Tournament. Vander Esch and Owen know that they will not be getting to the free throw line much in Sioux City, so they will need to focus on finishing near the basket. For us to be successful, Gall, ShaNae Horner, and Meghan Hughes will all need to contribute from the perimeter.

"On paper, Morningside is the team to beat - - but there are 32 teams at this tournament that have the same goal, and that is to win a national title. Shawnee State is 30-0, Northwestern won the title last year, and Ozarks returns most of its team that advanced to the national championship game. Any of the GPAC or DAC schools are battle tested to win five games in seven days. I feel that Concordia, Southern Oregon, and us all have the ability to advance in this tournament. It should be fun."
